Judge Mann, of the Hustings Court, today appeinted Mr. E. W. Couch City
Treasurer to fill the vacancy in that office.
In annonacing the appointment the Judge said that the Supreme Court of Appeals had declared the office vacant; that it was made his duty to fill the vacancy,
and that in doing so he should conform to the will of the people as expressed at the polls in May list. When Mr. Couch was poils in May last. When Mr. Couch was elected Treasurer over Mr. Virginius Johnson, Mr. Couch appeared and qualified by giving bend in the sum of $130,000 for the state and $50,000 for the city. Among his bondsmen are General Mahoue, for $75,-000; Mr. G. B. Eanes, for $30,000; Mr. J. T. Young, for $30,000, and others for small-er amounts. The bonds will be approved by the Council, and Mr. Couch will take charge of the office on Monday.

At Carter Town, in Rye Cove, they inquired if they could cross at Carter's ford, and were told that they could. The river was flush, though nearly clear, and upon reaching the ford, having been assured that they could safely cross, they unhesitatingly drove in Before the wagon was in the river, the two front horses were in swimming water. They turned up the river, servations. men were heard by parties who came to tical influence, who could be made to help their aid, but too late to save the life of Mr. her design of making her father President. Willis, who sank his last time just as some the wagon and swam out, but the other three were drowned. The remains of Mr. Willis were found some four hours later near where he sank. When found it required the strength of two men to loose him from the bottom of the river, and it is supposed that in his death-struggles he had firmly clinched something in the bottomprobably a stone or log.

A New York telegram says: In the suit for abandonment of Fainy Mordaunt against her husband, Frank Mordaunt, the actor, counsel for the latter to-day waived examination and filed a bond to provide for Mrs. Mordaunt, paying her eight dollars a week. The parties left the court, and shortly afterwards Mordaunt reentered shortly afterwards mordadus and asked for a warrant for his wife's arrest, charging that she had attempted to shoot him on the street. He said that as he was catering a liquor-store not far from the court, in company with his bondsman, he heard a cry of warning, and, turning, saw his wife behind him. He seized her by the hand, and she said, "Come and have a drick with me." He pushed her away, and she hastily departed. After she had gone be stated a young man told him that he had uttered a cry of warning; that he had seen Mrs. Mordaunt point a small pistol at his back and pull the trigger. It failed to explode, but she pointed it at him the second time. When she saw him turn-ing on hearing the shout, she hastily con-cented the weapon. An affidayit was made, and a warrant at once issued for the arrest of Mrs. Mordaunt, who was found in her lawyer's office, a few blocks away. When taken to court she cried bitterly, and detaken to court she cried bitterly, and de-nied ever having bada pistol. She had ap-proached her busband, she said, for the purpose of trying to arrange their difficul-ties amicably. She was held in $560 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

SYSTEM. A State reporter who accompanied a friend to the MISFIT STORE, 912—sin street, where mer-chant tablors misfits and fine clothing are adver-used for sale at very lew prices, allowed his friend to do all the talking, while he took notes on the following conversation:

point?

TroPRIETOR. Very easily. By the term missit the trade denominates all cirching left on the merchant failors, hands. This occurs in a dozen or more ways, Freenently continues, after ordering sails, find that they need the cash worse than they do the clothing. The consequence is that they forful their desoit, and the tailor finds himself stuck with the sail. At times, too, the tailor fails to sails fy in fit or finish. Toilors hade to less good enstoners, and rather than allow them to so away dissatts led in solenoing a riment goes among the misfits, while new armounts that will satisfy are made to replace them. These misfits the tailor is unable to self, for several reasons. He hasn't the convert those who cover after ordered goods into bayers of ready made clothing would ruin the trade of the merchant tailor.

ollowing conversation: CINTOMER: You certainly have a very large took of excellent crothing here, but your cheap rices astonish me. I am also mystifes by the consulisit clothing. How do you explain that CESTOMER: But I be not reasible that all the large stock are merchant utilers' mistis? PROPRIETOR: No. 1 do not make any such claim. Such an assert on would be an attempt to deceive the public. In fact, the larger portion of his stock is fine clothing prepared expressly for litchmoud trade. Now compare these two suits. It is one, being a mistit, came from a morehant sailor. Examine both car fully and you will see that atthough fluished with the care the merchant taler takes to retain good customers, it is no better made, trimmed, or bound than the other. Last they?
